ommended by the board lacked euphony.

A month ago the Commissioners overruled the Board of Education by naming the new school at Park View the Park View School, the board having recommended the name of Lemon G. Hine. In that case the Commissioners said they followed the request of the citizens of Park View.

One of the principal arguments of Commissioner Newman, in defending the plan of the Commissioners to secure absolute control of the schools, before the Federation of Citizens' Associations, several days ago, was that the Board of Education and the Commissioners frequently disagreed in handling the school matters into which both offices entered.
